Demonstrators Call for Recycling, Reduction and Composting

By Andree A. Belisle

MILLBURY - Local and state-wide environmentalists held a peaceful demonstration in the Yale Industrial Parking lot on Rte. 20 next to the Wheelabrator-Millbury Inc. resource recovery facility on Thursday, October 26, to highlight their concerns about recycling and air emissions and to call for a permanent moratorium on incinerators.

Dressed in protective clothing and wearing face masks, three members of the group calling themselves "Burnbusters", Linda Kijowski, Glen McGee, and Mary Lavergne, also addressed the need for waste reduction, recycling and composting programs.

"We believe that there are three alternatives to incineration and landfilling our waste that are much more responsible, produce much less pollution, and are much more cost effective," Kijowski said, "reduction, recycling and composting."

Kijowski called for the government to educate the public on recycling and to provide funding to establish cost effective and safe facilities for recycling. "Until the people stand up and demand of their public leaders that they take charge of the solid waste pollution crisis that is occurring in this country and around the world," Kijowski said, "we're going to be buried in our own solid waste. There isn't one good argument that can come forward to say that we should not be recycling. We've got to get to our politicians and tell them our environment is more important than the profits for waste disposal."

Kijowski also argued that films and plastics that are not recyclable do not need to be part of the waste stream. "These things go up in smoke," she said, "and they're a major contributor to the acid rain problem. Packaging that is covered with un-recyclable contaminants that don't allow packaging to be processed efficiently should be done without. There are alternatives, the engineers are out there. They should be working towards safe packaging materials that can be recycled and composted."

Kijowski also said that a lack of governmental encouragement inhibits recycling. "We have to encourage packagers to produce reusable material."

Speaking in favor of waste reduction, Glen McGee told the demonstrators that it will be necessary to get to the source of reducing solid waste, "reducing it in our packaging; reducing it in our consumer lifestyle. Right now," McGee said, "packaging engineers have not included waste reduction as a part of their design criteria. They don't design packaging that can be easily disposed of or recycled, and that needs to happen."

McGee maintained that incinerators are the major road block to recycling because "they fight for this waste stream. You can't recycle if those incinerators are burning it," he said.

The group also called for homeowners to compost their leaves, cuttings, and other yard waste. Calling this material a "tremendous volume in our waste stream," Burnbuster Mary Lavergne said there is no need to burn up such a natural and worthwhile resource. "Use it as topsoil," she said, "even if we have to cover up the landfills with this topsoil. Use it, don't burn it and breathe it."

(l-r) "Burnbusters" Glen McGee, Linda Kijowski, and Mary Lavergne, and Alison Leary, the Solid Waste Organizer for Clean Water Action.

The demonstrators emptied out bags of trash to illustrate which items can and cannot be recycled.

According to Kijowski, it is estimated that up to two-thirds of municipal solid waste can be composted. "We're not just talking about yard waste that can be composted; we're talking about tissues, paper towels. The technology is there," she said. "We need the government officials to make sure we first reduce, recycle and compost whatever we can, and then we will have a minimal amount that will need to go to incinerators and landfills."

Kijowski said that by adding incinerators and landfills, towns are competing for trash in the recycling market. "That's costing the taxpayers dollars," she said. "You're burning and burying vital natural resources. This is not waste; these are natural resources that can be used."

Also participating in the demonstration was Alison Leary, the Solid Waste Organizer for Clean Water Action, a national, grassroots based environmental organization founded in 1971 to lobby for the first Clean Water Act. In Massachusetts, Clean Water Action is a coordinator of Massachusetts Trash Action Coalition (MTAC) which is made up of five state-wide organizations and 30 local citizen groups. Last year, MTAC successfully lobbied for a one year moratorium on new garbage incinerators.

"We're here to show that we can recycle, compost, and reduce our trash instead of burning it in the Millbury facility, which burns 1500 tons per day and produces about 7000 tons of emissions into the air every year, including mercury, heavy metals, and dioxin," Leary said.

The group also announced the release of a report entitled, "Wheelabrator's Great Dump In The Sky." "Right now," McGee charged, "Wheelabrator is dumping more than three million pounds of sulphur dioxide which is causing acid rain and killing off our lakes and streams. We also discovered that it's dumping three tons of mercury into the air each year."

McGee also maintained that he was in possession of "hundreds and hundreds of violations. "Nothing's been done about it," he said. "The state officials are sitting on their hands. When are they going to get up and do something?"

Leary said the report also highlights the lack of enforcement by the DEQE (now known as the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). "In February of 1988 they (Wheelabrator) were 50% higher in allowable emissions for mercury," she alleged. "To date, the state has not taken any enforcement action whatsoever, and that includes up to 1000% over the emissions for carbon dioxide. The Chief of Air Quality, Tom Cusson, is not even sure if the monitoring equipment that monitors the volume going up the stack is working. He wonders about that. If they don't know that, how do we know this plant is in compliance?" she asked.

Leary also alleged that Wheelabrator has violated standard procedures. "They didn't test both boilers, they only tested one in November of 1988," she said. She then called for the state to "take its work seriously."

"Wheelabrator - this stack behind us, is the greatest single source of air pollution in the entire region of central Massachusetts," McGee said. "Think about it."

Kijowski then told the group, "You think that just because you don't see it it's not going to hurt you. Believe me, what you don't see is what's going to hurt you the most."

The demonstrators were hoping to meet with Wheelabrator officials to discuss their concerns. When told that company officials would not meet with them, Leary commented, "We just wonder what they're afraid of. What are they hiding? It's typical. They don't want to address the real questions, they don't want to face the facts, and unfortunately at this point in time the regulations and the regulators in the state don't either."

Wheelabrator officials did invite the press up to the facility. After waiting for approximately 15 minutes, reporters were ushered into a conference room where a group of men were seated around a conference table. Those present included the following: Millbury's Administrative Assistant

Call for Parental Involvement

To the Editor:

After approximately one year of planning, the Millbury Youth Center was opened in June of this year. Since its opening, the Center has served upwards of 700 youths. The youth need a place to "call their own" and the Center serves that purpose.

The second day that the Center was open, the Millbury Youth Commission held an "Open House" to acquaint the townspeople and town officials with the purpose and plans for the Center. Several town officials dropped by, but only a handful of parents.

On October 1st, a formal dedication was held at the Center and was attended by Rep. Paul Kollios, Senator John Houston, and past and present town officials. A dedication plaque was presented to the Center, as well as a citation from the Governor of the Commonwealth. Again, only a handful of parents were in attendance.

The Youth Commission meets in regularly posted meetings (the third Wednesday of each month) and to date, only one person has appeared to address the Commission with ideas or concerns. Meetings are held at the Youth Center at 7:00 p.m.

Recently, several parents and neighborhood residents have expressed concerns that the Center should perhaps be closed due to unfounded concerns. One parent berated the director of the Center because, after dropping his daughter off and returning to pick her up, learned that she was not there. While the volunteer monitors are responsible for the youths while they are in the Center, it is not their job to baby-sit or make sure that they stay in the Center.

Rather than circulate petitions, write letter, or berate the people who are concerned about the youth of Millbury, parents and town residents should attend Commission meetings to discuss their concerns, or volunteer their time occasionally to monitor the Center.

The youth are our future and we must all take an active part in their lives.

Millbury Selectmen's Meeting Digest

Board Holds Off on Sewage Commission Appointment

By Edward J. Cooney

MILLBURY - The October 24 Selectmen's meeting opened with a call to order at 7:04.

Sewage Commission Appointment

The first item of business concerned an appointment to the Sewerage Commission. Commission members George Buron and "Skip" Prue were also in attendance to vote on the appointment.

Jude Cristo, chairman of the Board of Selectmen, announced that the following individuals were up for consideration: Gary Nelson, Jackie Choiniere, and Hy Sclar.

Cristo noted the possibility of a tie since board member Roland Lachance was absent. Selectman Donald Gauthier then read a letter from Lachance, which stated his support of Gary Nelson to fill the vacancy.

Cristo said he did not think Lachance's written support of Nelson was a proxy vote and questioned whether it would be legal. He then called for nominations. Buron nominated Gary Nelson, followed by Prue and Selectman Gerry Bleau. Selectman John Donnelly nominated Jackie Choiniere, followed by Gauthier and Cristo.

Remarking that it was a tie vote, Cristo said, "I suspect we will have to wait for a full board unless someone wants to change their vote." Since no change came forward, Cristo announced that both boards will reconvene next Tuesday to take up the appointment again.

Juvenile Justice Project

Administrative Assistant Earl Chase reported that Mary Clark has requested that a letter be written in support of a Juvenile Justice Project that will be sponsored by YOU Inc. at the Center School. Several months ago the board voted approval of a project that would involve administrative offices and one bed for emergency use for juvenile runaways as an alternative to police lockup.

Clark's request indicated that the bed will no longer be a part of the application for state funding. The board approved the request on a 3-0-1 vote with Cristo abstaining.

Salting on Mass Pike

Chase updated the board on their request to have the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority reduce salting near Dorothy Pond. According to Chase, a representative from the Turnpike Authority was in town today to review locations for reduced salting. Chase also said that the representative was going to visit the water company to discuss concerns relating to increased salt in the water supply.

Oiling of Roads

According to Chase, several calls were received over the past week concerning the oiling of roads, more specifically McCracken Road. He said one complaint was received from a Grafton resident who maintained that the oiling had done some damage to the finish on his car. Chase also noted that the road was posted at both ends and was oiled five days prior to the complaint.

Police Business

Police Chief Ron Stokowski told the board that the Finance Committee has approved funding $3500 for the revolving account to pay for off-duty details in a timely manner.

Stokowski then asked for support of the Personnel Board's recommendation to increase the hourly rate for matrons and part-time dispatchers to $9.00 per hour. The request was approved and endorsed by the personnel board last March. The board voted 4-0 to support the recommendation.

Board of Health Vacancy

The board decided to change the date for voting on a candidate to fill a vacancy on the Board of Health to November 21. Chase said the opening was advertised but he was not aware of any candidates.

Resource Recovery

Chase said the Resource Recovery Advisory Committee has not been meeting as nothing has come up. "It's sort of in limbo," he said. "They have not been meeting for some time. They have all been reappointed. At some time, there was to be some testing."

Gauthier said he thought the state was going to do some testing. Chase replied that he was not aware of a specific time schedule.

Wheelabrator

Chase said Wheelabrator would be presenting a video in the Selectmen's Conference Room tomorrow surrounding the development of their plant.

Transfer of License

At 7:30, the board held a hearing on a request for the transfer of a liquor license from Lemay's Market on Millbury Avenue to Milton Wynja of Northbridge. Attorney Henry Lane represented Wynja, who also operates two other variety stores with licenses. The Millbury store will be operated and managed by Wynja's 23-year old son, Scott. Chase noted that a routine criminal records check has not been received as yet.

The store will be retained as a variety store with beer and wine and will operate under the name of Frank's Variety Store.

Cristo asked if any abutters were present. No one spoke or asked to be recognized.

Donnelly said his only concern was with the age of the gentleman who would be operating the store. "If there are any violations down there we will lower the boom - especially involving minors," he said.

A concern was raised over parking at the site. "What is there, always existed," Cristo said. "It's a tough spot."

The board approved Gauthier's motion for the transfer on a 4-0 vote. Chase said he would add that the vote should be contingent on other items such as the return of the record's check. The board concurred.

Citizens for Limited Taxation

The board listened to a presentation from John Roche from Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT). Roche asked the board for their signatures on a petition that would place a request on the ballot for a roll back of increases in fees, fines and taxes. Roche said that 50,000 signatures would be required, which he indicated would not be difficult to acquire.

Roche remarked that the Westboro Board of Selectmen had signed the petition. "If your board wishes to sign or if not, that's fine," he said.

"I would be opposed to endorse it as a board," Cristo said. Donnelly agreed.

In response to a question from Cristo and Bleau concerning the make-up of CLT, Roche responded that CLT was made up of "business people and other activists."

Roche expressed concern with mismanagement at the state level, noting that at present the administration was vague on how to resolve fiscal problems.

Millbury Avenue

Chase reported that an overlay on the base coat on Millbury Avenue was scheduled for today but had to be postponed until Thursday. Landscaping will be completed in the Spring.

Gauthier said he was told by Highway Surveyor Joe Chase that he recommended forgoing Cape Cod berm because it would require less landscaping.

The truck exclusion agenda item was held until the road is completed and a traffic study can be instituted.

Center School

Town Planner Dave Hulseberg told the board that a response to a grant request for the Center School was expected by November 15. He noted that other alternatives would be considered if notice was not forthcoming by that time.

Chase said that three lights would be needed to light up the outside of the school, one in the street to be upgraded and one on each side of the building.

Bleau said the greatest need was for one on the side where the swings are located, and suggested doing one at a time.

St. Charles Hotel

Cristo brought up a matter under addenda for old business concerning the New St. Charles Hotel. A letter from the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission noted that they accepted the hotel' s offer to pay a $366.72 fine in lieu of a suspension of their license.

Executive Session

At 8:20, the board moved to executive session at the request of Town Planner David Hulseberg to discuss strategy pertaining to pending litigation involving the Planning Board and Jean and Benjamin Miles.

Billboards

Upon returning to open session at 8:35, the board reviewed the mail. Gauthier began with a listing of billboard permits held by Ackerly Communications Inc. of Stoneham. An accompanying letter noted that the permits "were extended until December 31, 1990 or until a final determination is reached concerning the appeal of Board action regarding a prior year's renewal request."

Donnelly noted that the permits are for existing billboards since additional billboards are not permitted under the Town's bylaws.

Notice of Noncompliance

Gauthier referred to a Notice of Noncompliance sent by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering to Felters Company on West Street. The notice described the following areas of noncompliance:

1. The Company is conducting hazardous waste activity without proper notification to the Department.
2. The company's hazardous waste (waste oil) accumulation tank and containers were not properly labelled.
3. The Company did not post a sign at its hazardous waste (waste oil) accumulation area.
4. The company did not mark its hazardous waste (waste oil) accumulation area.
5. The company did not properly label its satellite accumulation containers.
6. The company had open satellite accumulation containers.
7. The company did not meet the requirements governing emergency procedures, prevention and response.

Within 21 calendar days from the date of the Notice (October 16), the DEQE must have received written confirmation that Felters is in compliance with the requirements.

19 North Main Street

The board received a letter from Michael J. Venincasa, Trustee of MJ Casa Development Trust, which read, in part, as follows: "In furtherance of our efforts to resolve the issues surrounding our property at 19 North Main Street, we respectfully propose to remove the third floor from the structure and replace this area with a flat roof. As part of this proposal, the first floor would be utilized for retail space and the second floor will accommodate four (4) one (1) bedroom apartments."

The letter asked for the board's comments and suggestions. The board deferred discussion as it pertained to an issue with the Planning Board and the Board of Appeals.

Street Light Petition

The board received a petition signed by six residents of the South Main Street area for the installation of a street light on South Main Street at the point of entrance to the New England Power lines. The petition noted that there has been a continuing serious problem with illegal dumping at the site. Chase was asked to check for pole locations in the area. The matter will be discussed next week.

Direct Payment Requests

Gauthier referred to three different letters from subcontractors who performed work or services for the transfer station at the landfill. Mulholland Construction Co. of Warwick R.I. is the general contractor. All three subcontractors sent letters of demand for direct payment as they have not been paid by Mulholland for services rendered.

Chase noted that the performance bond would cover the demand notices and said he would contact the engineer on the job.

The meeting adjourned at 8:50 p.m.

Polyclad Proposal Elicits Neighborhood Concerns

By Alec Belisle

MILLBURY - In the newly rearranged Planning Board/Building Inspector's office and hearing room, Planning Board Chairwoman Anna Lewandowski and members Lillian Moore, Ann Kniskern, and Terry Burke Dotson met with about thirty residents from the South Main Street area, John Innamoretti from I&I Construction Company, and David Damm, Plant Engineer for Polyclad to consider a Site Plan Review and Special Permit to construct a two story addition to Polyclad's plant at 86 Providence Road.

Innamoretti explained that Polyclad proposes to construct a 40x60 foot cinder block and structural steel addition on a concrete slab. The structure would be located at the rear of their existing facility and would provide 2,400 feet of usable space on each floor. Polyclad would also provide 23 new parking spaces in addition to the 44 presently on site. It was noted that Polyclad has 60 people working at the existing site.

Innamoretti said there were four reasons for the addition: 1. Polyclad wants to make the facility safer by providing for any spills that might occur. The new facility would, according to Innamoretti, "eliminate the danger of any acid spills because we are making provisions in the facility that will store - it's a water proof pit with a grating over it - any acid now stored on the site will be stored in this new area which will exceed any capacity for storage by about 100%. If there is any storage it will be self-contained within the specific area. There will be no drainage. That will create a safer environment for the employees," he said.

2. To create a new cafeteria for the employees.

3. To create office space. Innamoretti said that offices are presently located throughout the building in the center of the manufacturing area.

4. To relocate the existing laboratory.

Damm explained that Polyclad laminates material for computer boards. Epoxy resin is bonded to fiberglass cloth which is coated with copper on one side.

It was also noted that the company will not be adding any facilities or chemicals to their product line. "This facility will only support the manufacturing operation that's currently existing on the site," Innamoretti said.

Lewandowski asked if there would be any change in volume. "We don't anticipate any increase in volume," Damm said. "We're limited by how much chemical we can bring in."

Innamoretti also assured the board that any construction would meet local, state and federal fire standards.

Area residents expressed their opposition to the expansion on several grounds. Captain Peter Simpson Road resident Vito Ventura, an abutter to the property, asked if any filtration system was in place for fumes from the plant.

Damm explained that Polyclad installed a thermal oxidizer which exceeds state requirements for emissions.

"Then I'd like to know why I still, this past Winter going into Spring, could smell chemicals either late at night or early in the morning," Ventura said.

"I can't answer that question," Damm responded, "It's not from our facility."

South Main Street resident Catherine Marchand commented that when Polyclad applied for permission to operate seven days a week, it was stated that a seven day operation was necessary because a shut down of Polyclad's equipment would create production problems.

"We were on a seven day schedule; now the market doesn't require it," Damm said. He also noted that Polyclad has an open-ended clause in their agreement and could go back to a seven day a week production.

Damm was also asked if the company plans any workload increases or any expansion of the plant to the 25 acres they own in the rear of the facility.

"There are no plans to increase the capacity of the manufacturing operation as far as the laminating operation is concerned, "Damm said.

Town Planner David Hulseberg reassured the residents that limitations were such that in order for Polyclad to expand into the 25 acres they would have to go to before a Town Meeting.

South Main Street resident Thomas Woods expressed hopes that Polyclad's addition would not be creating a situation similar to the one that existed in Quinsigamond Village with Lewcott.

"Lewcott and Polyclad were never the same company," Damm responded. "We were both owned by BBF but we never did the same work."

"At one time," Marchand said, "Lewcott was coating helmets, and when they did not have the capacity, did not Polyclad coat those helmets?"

"No," Damm replied.

Markey remarked, "From an economic standpoint, I guess I become a little bit suspicious when a 4,800sq. ft. building is proposed that's going to cost between $200,000 and $240,000 to build. And it's going to be proposed by a company that the gentleman (Damm) said that business is so slow that they went down from seven days a week (production) to five days a week. Why they would want to spend $240,000 so they would have a safer place to store a barrel and a half of contaminated products, from an economic standpoint, doesn't make much sense. I would think there'd be something much more involved here for that kind of money."

"There's nothing more involved than what we stated," Damm replied.

Hulseberg suggested that the board make a site visit to the plant and open the visit to the public.

There was a motion to continue the hearing to Monday, November 13 at 8:00 and to visit the facility Thursday, November 9 at 7:30. (Later during the meeting, the board, in reviewing its mail, discovered a previous commitment. The on-site visit to Polyclad was rescheduled for Wednesday, November 8 at 6:30 p.m.)

to the Board of Selectmen, Earl Chase,;Harold Ostrowski, Assessor and the Town's representative on the Central Mass Regional Solid Waste Commission; Town Planner Dave Hulseberg; and former Selectman Wynton Adams.

Dan Madigan, Wheelabrator's New England Regional Manager, explained the presence of local officials: "We are doing a public relations promotional film, which we were doing this morning before all of this was scheduled," he said. "Some of the people that are in this film are local public officials who are going to be involved in the film and who were already interviewed earlier this morning. (The Chronicle was present at the Town Hall on Wednesday, October 25 when Wynton Adams was being recorded for a portion of the promotional film. A representative of the film company stated at that time that Ostrowski would also be appearing in the video.)

"I've asked the people that are here," Madigan said, "since this is somewhat of a controversial issue and I'm paying these guys for the day anyway (Madigan was referring to the film crew), I said, once we get done with the initial interviews you might as well come to this press conference where you can probably hear some volatile questions being asked and some answers."

Prior to opening the press conference up to questions, Madigan talked at length about the company's reaction to the demonstration and to reports released by Clean Water Action. He also discussed the company's recycling efforts and their long range plans.

Madigan said the company anticipated that the demonstration would be fairly well covered based on a "pretty substantial article" that appeared last week in The Herald. "I read it," Madigan said, "and I expected there was going to be somewhat of a significant demonstration here."

Madigan noted that the Commonwealth was in the process of conducting hearings on the extension of the State's one year moratorium on incinerators. "I believe the reason for this demonstration," he said, "was to focus attention on that moratorium and obviously to use the Millbury facility as a backdrop for that type of demonstration."

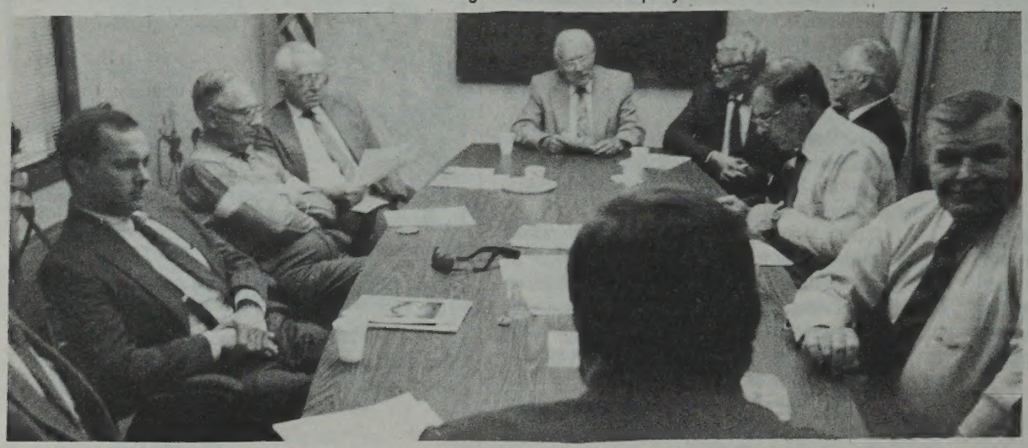
Saying that Wheelabrator believes resource recovery is a significant part of an integrated solution to the solid waste problem, Madigan maintained that resource recovery "is a valuable and effective means of trash disposal."

Madigan also said that the company is not anti-recycling: "We're very much interested in seeing recycling become successful in the United States, and we want to participate in that part of an integrated solution. But," he continued, "I think you've got to be practical, sincere, honest, and forthright in some of these things. And I think having demonstrations and issuing press releases with figures that are somewhat deceiving and providing basic misconceptions to the average citizen is not the answer."

Madigan argued that one reason recycling is having difficulty getting off the ground is a lack of development of end uses for recycling materials in the United States. "The responsible thing for industry to do and for government regulators and anyone else," he said, "is to promote these end use systems, make them a viable part of the solution."

Madigan then announced that the company is in the preliminary stages of building a $500M recycling paper mill in Central Pennsylvania. "It's our hope we can get this project up and off the ground," he said. Madigan explained that the mill will take recyclable materials from the Northeastern part of the United States to produce paper board that can be used in the market place. "There aren't necessarily great incentives presently for recycling in the industrial sector because there just aren't facilities available to take these products and make them into something useful. I think we think that's where it all has to begin," he said.

Madigan then argued that the Wheelabrator facility is not an incinerator. "It's constantly referenced as an incinerator in almost everything that I read and hear about; public officials refer to it as an incinerator. This, as a matter of fact," he said, "is a resource recovery plant."



Seated at the conference table for Wheelabrator's press conference: (l-r) Town Planner Dave Hulseberg; former Selectman Wynton Adams; Earl Chase, Administrative Assistant to the Board of Selectmen; two unidentified individuals; Harold Ostrowski, Assessor and the Town's representative on the Central Mass. Regional Solid Waste Commission; Robert Jacques, Manager of Landfill Operations for Wheelabrator; and Dan Madigan, Wheelabrator's New England Regional Manager.

Power Plant Proposed in Sutton

By Terry Barnicle

SUTTON - With the exception of Wally Johnson, all board members were present for the October 24 Selectmen's meeting.

Three representatives of the Boston firm of J. Makowski Co., Inc. were present to discuss a proposal to build an 85-megawatt power plant on 12 acres of land near Route 146 and Central Turnpike. Senior Vice President Benjamin Weiner explained that the company has identified potential in Sutton due to the high tension wires. "We are investigating putting in a generating unit called a 'peaking unit'," Weiner said. "It's a simple cycle gas turbine generator, a jet engine which is used on the ground in times of peak energy needs."

The company's Director of Power Project Development, Lou Plavidal, said the generating unit would run only in the daytime; 6-8 hours in the summer and less in winter. The unit would operate on pipeline gas and residential oil. "Like a jet engine, Plavidal said, "it has lower capital costs than a base-load power plant, but is less efficient. The result is an overall economic savings."

The company's Environmental Manager, Neil Collins, reported that Massachusetts has one of the strictest noise-pollution laws. "We are looking at land near Rte. 146 where the noise level is already established," he said. "There is noise when (the unit) is turned on, but the noise is not noticed once it is on. We have tried to pick a site where (the noise) won't intrude on the neighbors."

In response to a question from Selectman Rick LaBonte on the number of employees the facility would require, Weiner replied, "it is fully automated, maybe one to turn it on and to maintain it. It won't run on weekends or night so it won't bother people when they're asleep."

Selectman Carl Licopoli asked why they would choose to use home heating oil. "Because it's cheaper in the winter," Weiner replied..

Weiner also told the board that they could view a similar operation in the town of Ludlow, Massachusetts.

Resident Larry Moore asked about the location, zoning, noise, effluents, and the benefits to the town.

The location was given as the northeast corner of the intersection of 146 and Central Turnpike.

With respect to emissions, Collins stated, "We can't say now. There will be nitrogen oxides, carbon monoxide, and carbon dioxide."

In answer to whether it is properly zoned, Collins replied, "No."

It was explained that the tank would be the size of an average ranch house. Collins said that the unit uses one trailer truck load of oil per hour and that the noise level would equal 55 decibels, "that of a jet engine, which it is," he said. "It is like the noise of continuous rain, but you forget about if after a while."

As to benefits to the town, Weiner said, "It will give the maximum tax value to the town. The hardware will cost $25M with a total cost of $38M."

Why that location?" Moore asked.

The representatives responded that it was near the power lines and the highway. They also said that part of the Towle property will be bought.

The company is an independent producer and will not be selling energy to utility companies.

Weiner also explained that wells will be drilled as the unit will consume 200 gallons per minute for a total of 100,000 gallons per day. He said the water table of the area would not be affected as they will be coordinating their efforts with the Wilkinsonville Water District.

A concern was raised over the danger to children. Weiner responded, "High voltage equipment will be there."

It was also noted that construction would not begin for two years even if all necessary permits were received immediately.

Letter of Grievance

The board voted to send a letter of grievance to Governor Dukakis and local representatives in state government protesting the recent awarding of Emergency Local Aid Grants. The letter noted that the criteria "seems to reward towns which have chosen not to override or exempt capital projects from Proposition 2 1/2 limits."

Board members agreed that Sutton was unfairly treated.

Vacancy on Appeals board

The board announced a vacancy on the Board of Appeals and put out an appeal for candidates.

Holiday Fair

WORCESTER - The Ladies Home League of the Quinsigamond Corps of The Salvation Army will hold its annual Holiday Fair on Saturday, November 4, from 1-4 p.m. at 884 Millbury Street. Moore and John "Jack" Driscoll, as well as The Honorable George Keverian, Speaker of the House of Representatives. The students will tour the State House, the House of Representatives, the Senate, the Hall of Flags, the Speakers' Chambers, and be given historical background by a State House tour guide.

After the visit, the students will adjourn to the Bunker Hill Pavilion where they will view a multi-media presentation entitled, "The Whites of the Their Eyes." The field trip will be supervised by David Muradian and Paul Henrickson, both American Government teachers at the high school.

Sturbridge Recycling Program Topic of Meeting

SUTTON - A recycling program in Sturbridge will be the focus of a Blackstone Valley Chamber of Commerce membership breakfast on Tuesday, November 7, form 7:30-9:00 a.m. at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Joseph Silverberg, chairman of the Sturbridge Recycling Committee, and George Berry, chairman of the Sturbridge Board of Health, will discuss how recycling is providing their town with extra time to address a more permanent solid waste disposal alternative. They will be joined by James A., Harvey, treasurer of E.L. Harvey & Sons, who will talk about state funds available for recycling education and programs to communities that are willing to regionalize.

Cost of the meeting is $7 per person and advance registration is required. To register, contact Becky Goodwin at 753-2924.

There will be a number of tables to visit to start your Christmas shopping early. A snack table will also be available to satisfy your needs for a cup of hot coffee or a bite to eat. The raffle table will have many attractive articles for you to take chances on. Among the many articles is a beautiful hand-crafted doll house, completely furnished.

The Baked Goods table always features many home cooked items to appeal to all tastes. The White Elephant Table is usually overflowing with articles of every description where one person's cast-off is another person's treasure. Crafts consisting of needlepoint, knitting, and crocheted articles will also be on display.

Youth Speech Competition

MILLBURY - Juniors and Seniors at Millbury High are presently involved in the Youth Speech Competition sponsored by the Millbury Lions Club. The top five candidates will compete for a $200 scholarship while runners-up will each receive a $50 bond. The topic of this year's contest is "What My Family Means to Me."

Millbury students have excelled in this competition for the last two years. Cindy Berthiaume (1988) and Melissa Phelan (1989) both advanced through local, zone, and regional competitions to the District Finals. They both finished as runners-up.

At the District level, the students compete for a $1,000 scholarship. After the district competition, there will be state-wide competition for the first time, which means additional scholarships.

The local competition will be held on Wednesday, November 8, at 7:30 p.m. in the High School Auditorium. The public is invited to attend.

Ride-A-Thon Weekend

Lori Tampowsky, DVM, of the Tufts University Veterinary School, checks the pulse and respiration of IBN Fadaf during the Water's Farm Ride-a-Thon weekend. IBN belongs to 10 year old Sutton resident Ryan O'Hearn, who placed second in the Junior Division of the 25 mile ride.

SUTTON - The Waters Farm Horsemen's Association held a very successful Ride-A-Thon Weekend to benefit the Waters Farm Preservation Fund on October 14 and 15. Although a final tally of pledges has not yet been counted, it is expected that the total donations will exceed the $2,000 mark set at last year's Ride-A-Thon.

Those individuals topping the list for pledged donations to the farm are: Lucy Davis of Douglas, $1,156.00; Norma Bombara of Oxford, $110.25; P. Jolene Havalotti of West Brookfield, $103.50; and Ryan O'Hearn of Sutton, $85.00.

The Waters Farm Horsemen's Association would like to thank all volunteers who gave their time and energy to make this a successful weekend, to those riders and driver who participated and worked so hard to collect their pledges, and to the following individuals and businesses who contributed to the ride: T.J. Houston Receives Kit Clarke Award

BOSTON - Senator John P. Houston (D-Worcester) recently received the Annual Kit Clarke award for his support of the work of elder services for the citizens of Massachusetts. The Massachusetts Association of Elderly Nutrition Programs (MAENP), which promoted quality nutrition services through meal programs for the elderly, honored Houston at their annual meeting in Ashland on October 12.

"I'm flattered to join the company of past recipients such as Frank Manning," Houston said. "It's thanks to the advocacy and service of organizations like MAENP that nutrition programs are available to elders."

From My Window on Farnsworth Court

By "Pastor Rae" Cameron

The Millbury Baptist Church Choir sang its heart out on Saturday night, October 21, at Notre Dame Des Canadiens Roman Catholic Church. They sang Faure's "Requiem Mass" in Latin; quite a feat for a Baptist Choir, and concluded with three English pieces. Rehearsals for this work began last Spring, continued though tape recordings through the Summer and resumed this Fall. It was a lot of hard work, but most enjoyable. A harpist and two soloists were included in the program to result in a most wonderful evening of music.

Notre Dame is a most magnificent cathedral in which to do a musical program, and it will hold over 700 people. That evening there were 40 present. That is most discouraging, but one that Millbury Baptist Church Choir is used to as they sing to about the same numbers every Sunday in their own Church.

Something is most desperately wrong here. Whether it is within the Church itself or within our society, I'm not entirely sure. We at Millbury Baptist Church have been doing some Cottage Meetings this month and asking ourselves some very hard questions about our Church and its ministry. We are praying and having Revival Services this week in hopes that God will be pleased to visit us with a revival.

My studies on revivals have indicated that most major revivals do not start within the Church, but within society. People begin to realize their need for God and God raises up a very special person who reaches out to the masses with God's good news of salvation and deliverance. Our Revival Services are being held in hopes that God will send a revival and that we as a Church will be prepared to meet the needs of people effected by it.

Madigan went on to explain that the plant accepts 1500 tons of trash every day and produces an average of 40 megawatt hours of electricity on a consistent basis. "We've done a very good job with energy conservation in the United States, and I hope we'll do a similar job with recycling," he said.

Madigan also said that the cleanest megawatts of electricity produced in the Commonwealth are produced by resource recovery plants. "The emissions that come from this chimney are less harmful to the environment than the emissions that come from any fossil fuel facilities, whether it be industrial or utility." Referring to a statement in the Clean Air report that states "Wheelabrator is the largest single source of pollution in Central Massachusetts," Madigan said, "That may or not be true because there aren't any large significant industrial sources in Central Massachusetts whether they be power generators or manufacturing facilities that use burning processes."

Madigan argued that it was never noted that Wheelabrator was the biggest installation in Central Massachusetts. "...if it's the biggest installation it's going to be the most significant installation relative to emissions," he said. "It wasn't stated that this was the biggest installation, just that it's the biggest emitter. And that again may or may not be the truth."

Madigan then argued that the worst form of combustion known to man is a log burning in a fireplace. "There's nothing worse than that," he said, "and the emissions that come from that are very harmful. But it doesn't sell newspapers to criticize Mrs. O'Malley's fireplace."

Madigan also discussed European technology. "If you go to a city like Zurich or Hamburg, Germany," he said, "you'll find that there's a society of people that are all Swiss or all German, they think the same way, they're not like this group of gentlemen here who have different concepts, mores, habits and so forth and are a bit more cosmopolitan. These people who live in structured societies with a lot of government regulations and controls have found that a very important and integral part of their solid waste disposal problems and solutions is a resource recovery facility."

With respect to landfills, Madigan argued, "The so-called sanitary landfill that was perpetrated on us by certain people in the government back in the early 70's, I don't know what's sanitary about it, but they supposedly are."

Madigan said that Wheelabrator has made it possible to facilitate the closure of a minimum of 15 landfills in the area. "I would say that's 15 major sources of our controlled pollution," he said.

At this point, Madigan again noted that the individuals seated around the conference table were all public officials. "They're users of this facility and represent various communities in one form or another," he explained. "I've asked them to come here and be with me today and express their views on it."

Somewhat surprised that local officials would have been invited to participate in a Wheelabrator press conference and appear on a promotional video, the Chronicle asked those assembled the following questions:

Q: Is this a public relations video?

A: Madigan, "Yes."

Q: "Are these gentlemen being paid?"

A: Madigan, "No."

Q: Are they representing their towns on the video?

A: Madigan, "No."

The Chronicle noted that one unidentified individual was shaking his head "yes." Madigan in turn said, "There's only been one or two people on the video that are in this group here today."

Q: Only a few people here are on the video?

A: Madigan, "The video that we were doing for the company, yes."

Q: Are any of the town officials on the video?

A: Madigan, "I don't know."

The Chronicle then asked Harold Ostrowski if he was present to represent the town.

A: Ostrowski replied, "I represent the town on the Central Mass Regional Solid Waste Commission. I was asked if I would appear on the TV and I agreed to because I've been involved in this from the very first beginning of this operation. And they asked questions on how this thing started. But I am an official of the Town of Millbury. As far as I'm concerned I am representing the Board of Selectmen."

Q: You're representing the Board of Selectmen?

A: Ostrowski, "Representing the board of selectmen on the Central Mass Regional Solid Waste Commission."

Q: Whatever you said on the video, is that the feeling of the entire board of selectmen?

A: Ostrowski, "No. I'm representing the board of selectmen because they asked me to come here. The board of selectmen did not ask me to appear on a video. I appeared on the video as being a representative of them. They did not ask me to come here. I am still a private citizen. I am knowledgeable about how the solid waste got started; I am quite happy with the result of it; I would volunteer to be on TV anytime talking about the plant."

Q: Mr. Hulseberg, can you tell us why you are here. Are you representing the Planning Board?

A: Hulseberg responded, "I'm not representing the Planning Board. I'm here as the Town Planner of Millbury speaking of the issue of land use particularly and how valuable land is as a commodity, and how important it is for communities to recognize that land is a true asset and that we need to provide adequate space and facilities for our trash. One of the most positive mechanisms to do that is through incineration. Incineration reduces the amount of trash which has to be dealt with at various landfills and these landfills pose extreme problems. For example, the site here in Millbury is on an aquifer. The possible leaching from the various materials that are dumped there could have an extreme negative effect on the aquifer and our water supplies. So as a planner, I'm here really to try to focus on the specifics and the real issue of why this is important."

Hulseberg also noted that he did not appear on the video.

Q: Mr. Chase, are you here representing the town?

A: Chase replied, "Yes I am, representing the Board of Selectmen.

Q: For what purpose?

A: There was to be a demonstration by a political action committee, and I'm here on the town's behalf.

Q: A little more information on why the town felt you should be here?

A: "This organization, this company, certainly has solved a problem for the town; the problem of its waste disposal. It certainly is a significant business symbol."

Reporters were then allowed to ask questions. The Chronicle questioned why company officials refused to meet with the demonstrators, some of whom included Millbury residents. "I'm not going to invite an activist group which is anti-incinerator and uses very loose transmittal of facts into the facility to play a role in something that I can't be supportive of," Madigan replied. "If there was a citizen of Millbury out there demonstrating today that would make no difference to me. He would not be invited in either under the guise of this 'let's not incinerate any further let's recycle, and Wheelabrator's a bad company.'"

The "Great Dump in the Sky" report charged that Wheelabrator had exceeded its Mercury limits by 50% at one time. The Chronicle asked if this statement was true. "No," Madigan replied. "The plant is in compliance in all of its air pollution controls." Since Madigan then said that he had not read that portion of the report, it was read aloud. After listening to the quoted portion, Madigan said, "I can't say whether that's specifically true or not. It depends on the interpretation." He then turned to Robert Jacques, the company's manager of landfill operations, who explained, "I believe that one of the tests that was performed for mercury was different than the other three; it was higher than the other three. Subsequent tests done after that proved the accuracy of the three out of the four."

"If the average citizen reads that," Madigan argued, "it sounds like a terrible thing. As a matter of fact, there are variant pollutants that come from solid waste burning, all sorts of pollutants are generated as a function of the process or a function of any burning process. The permit limits are not set up on an individual basis for one spike (exceedance) that may occur from time to time. The limit is set up on an annualized basis. If a spike occurred during a test it doesn't necessarily mean that the plant was in violation. You have to read what these permits say and how the permit is constructed and what the experts and the scientists and the agencies and the regulators, our government, decide is going to protect the public health. Occasionally everything known to man that is built by man and run by man will foul up."

When asked if that statement was in defense of the plant, Madigan replied, "I'm saying the plant is in compliance. If you take the spike during the test, it's not an indication of a violation."

The Chronicle then asked Madigan to respond to another statement in the report that charged that for the November 1988 compliance tests, test samples were done only for the unit one boiler. "This appears to be in direct violation of air permit which specifies that 'all testing shall be done on each boiler.'" the report stated.

Responding to the question was Plant Manager John O'Sullivan who stated, "Number one was tested in November of 1988; number 2 was tested in August of this year. And nine months after the August test No. 1 will be viewed again."

"Is that according to the permit?" he was asked. "Yes," O'Sullivan replied.

Madigan was then asked by the Chronicle if it is true that Wheelabrator is burning composted sewage sludge as alleged in the report. "That's absolutely not true," Madigan replied, adding "Let me clarify that." He then turned to Jacques who explained, "What's not true is what's stated there is that we're burning sewage sludge. The facility has burned, it's not burning now, compost from the Westboro Regional Treatment Facility earlier this year. The compost that's burned here as an alternative to its being spread and used as a loam. That facility is no longer composting sludge because of problems in that process at that facility, and is now taking its composted sludge or its untreated sludge to an appropriate facility in some other state."

When asked if that was a violation of Wheelabrator's contract with Millbury, Madigan replied, "No, absolutely not. The reason why I attacked that is because I've heard that accusation before. What we were burning was acceptable, permittable waste as regulated by the DEQE. The composted sludge that you're referring to is classified as a solid waste. The indication in that press release is that we're doing something that we shouldn't be doing."

"As a matter of fact," Jacques added, "the treatment facility found it necessary prior to being permitted to bring the material here to get written approval from the DEQE."

The Chronicle then asked Madigan several questions on "special waste," including whether or not special waste was ever burned at the Millbury plant. "Yes," Madigan replied.

When asked to classify special waste, Madigan answered, "Bank checks, confidential material." "That's your definition of special waste?" the Chronicle asked, "Yes, absolutely," he replied.

"What would you consider "fluff" (auto shredder residue)?" he was then asked. "We don't burn fluff," Madigan replied.

When asked if he considered fluff special waste, Madigan said, "I don't know what the classification is. I believe that's up in the air, but my facilities have never taken fluff. We did an experimental burn many, many years ago and had physical problems handling it."

Madigan was asked if the DEP had contacted Wheelabrator on the feasibility of burning fluff. "Yes," he replied, "and to be perfectly honest with you, I would probably not allow the burning of fluff at these plants. I've never burned any, and I wouldn't allow it. It's physically, in my opinion, a very difficult material to handle."

Madigan also noted that there have been indications that fluff contains PCB's. "...we're obviously not permitted to burn anything with PCB's in it," he said. "It's my understanding that the department is probably going to reclassify that material after a series of tests have been done. But even if they do, from the standpoint of good engineering practices, I would avoid burning fluff."

Madigan also said that Wheelabrator would never burn medical waste. "We're not in that business. We're strictly in the solid waste business and not in the hazardous or medical waste business," he said.

Madigan was asked if the plant had exceeded their allowable air emissions within the past year. "I don't think so," he replied. "I don't think we've had any permit violations. We've probably had some exceedances, spikes, but we're not in violation of any permits."

During the press conference, Madigan also announced that the company is the American licensee of a front end separation system. "Millbury is one of the sites that we're looking at to do some of that work," he said.

Reporter Scott McLennen of the Fitchburg Sentinel-Enterprise asked if Wheelabrator would consider building a disposal facility that did not involve burning. "Wheelabrator would consider building anything to do with solid waste if it made sense," Madigan replied. "If it was a venture where we could truly service the public, keep our heads above water and sustain a reliable cost-effective solution whether it be recycling or whatever. Obviously, we're in the pollution control business."

Also at the demonstration was a film crew from WGBH-TV Channel 2 in Boston which was taking footage for a 10-part series entitled "Race To Save The Nation." The series, which will deal with the problems of waste disposal worldwide, is scheduled to be part of the 20th anniversary of Earth Day, which was first celebrated on April 22, 1970.

Another Point of View

Imperial Representative

By Lawrence Moore

Recently, the Telegram & Gazette ran an editorial headlined, "Imperial Congress." Our U.S. Representative, Joseph Early, stands in the forefront of the Hierarchy.

Indeed, when you examine the record, Joe Early is far ahead of most of his colleagues. The T&G raises questions about the Congressman's travel and staffing activities. Let's go back a step and ask a few questions about his legislative performance.

In his years in Congress, what has Joe Early done? Which bills has he initiated? On which major policy matters has he taken a stand (other than the pay raise issue, which he favored)? How often have you seen him quoted in the press or on TV on key issues? (Yes, he is in favor of the Blackstone Valley Heritage Park.) On which committees or sub-committees does he serve, other than Appropriations? Are there others with as much or less seniority who chair committees or who serve on more than one committee? When you think about it, you may have some questions of your own.

As far as the T&G is concerned, he may be an able legislator. My vote, as is that of many of you, is up for grabs, but I'd like to know what I'm voting for. As taxpayers we are entitled to know what our representative is doing legislatively. We would welcome answers. These are questions of Performance; now to the questions of Activity.

Isn't it surprising that of the entire Massachusetts delegation, a delegation that includes many prominent, constructive, influential, yes, even brilliant members, our own Joe Early wins the Frequent Traveler Award.

That raises a few questions. Where did he go? For what purpose? At whose request? Was the purpose accomplished? Was a report made? The answers to these questions may satisfy those of us surprised at the "travel" statistic, but failure to answer the questions will say "junket" to some of us.

Now to the question of the cost of keeping the Congressman's operations going. The amount spent, in nine months, is $498,382! That figure, while not too far from what is probably the average, is again the HIGHEST of Bay State Congressmen. Who are the staff? What are they paid? What do they do? When you consider what appears to be limited legislative activity, this staff must be engaged in "taking care of" constituents' problems. And this of course takes care of a congressman's re-election. But what else do they do?

How long are we going to put up with our problem of incumbency? When are we going to resolve that the 3rd District seat is not a life-long sinecure? When will a worthwhile challenger, Democrat or Republican, come forward and open OUR congressional representation to the scrutiny we taxpayers deserve?

Get moving, Mr. Shamie, or, as I've said before, you'll blow your great chance to challenge a rotten system! Get moving bright, young, aggressive reform Democrats, and give us a choice in the Primary!

N.B. Since Mr. Early is a very low-key person, perhaps he is being misjudged and criticized wrongly. Needless to say, when we receive the answers to our questions, and any other pertinent information, this column will rush to print his reply.

On The Shelf

By Rosemary Waltos

Go to any library, large or small, and they will brag about their reference and information services and their ability to keep up with the demand for materials. The Millbury Public Library is no exception. However, a limited budget and tight staffing at the library means we have to get a lot of mileage out of our collection and use the services available to us on behalf of our patrons.

To answer your questions and provide information, we pull from all facets of our own collection and, when necessary, tap into other collections and services. These outside services, such as the Central Massachusetts Regional Library System, Worcester and Fitchburg Public and other public libraries, the consortium of academic, medical and corporate libraries, government agencies and individuals and corporations are all tapped into in one way or another.

Keeping up with requests for both current and back issues of magazines is a challenge that has to be met on the local level. Limited storage space at the library means back issues of periodicals and newspapers must be kept at a minimum. The prohibitive cost of space saving microfilm machines and microfilm and/or fiche itself is beyond the library's budget. So instead, we often must refer patrons to other libraries for periodicals that we do not own. To do this, we use the three volume set of the Worcester Area Union List of Serials produced by the Worcester Cooperating Libraries. This comprehensive reference source lists magazines and newspapers from collections of some 38 public, corporate, college and medical libraries.

Another way of obtaining periodical articles is through our interlibrary loan channels at the Central Massachusetts Regional System. If you request a specific article, we can get it for you. Rush requests for articles available from the Worcester or Fitchburg collections can be obtained in 24 to 48 hours.

We talk a lot about interlibrary loan services at the library. This is a service provided to our patrons in order to make material available that is not owned by the Millbury Public Library, but owned by other libraries. The library uses regional services to fill requests for materials from libraries in Massachusetts and across the nation. The wait for these materials can be as little as one week.

For people in a hurry, the library can search the C/WMARS database, a service providing information from collections of participating libraries located in both the Central and Western regions of the state. By simply dialing in and searching the database for specific titles, we can tell you if a participating library in our area owns it. In many cases, we can tell you if the title is on that library's shelf. The patron then has the option of going to the library to pick up the item. Auburn, Worcester, Northboro, Shrewsbury and Westboro are a few of the nearby public libraries whose collections are currently on-line.

On-line subject searching is now available to Millbury Public Library patrons. This is not really another service, it is another technique for providing traditional reference services. On-line capabilities cater to patrons with obscure, complex, and/or specialized information needs. This service is offered through the Millbury Public Library by the Regional System and the Worcester and Fitchburg Public Libraries.

Another source for information outside the library community is the Citizen Information Service. This service provides referrals to appropriate state government agencies and information on consumer affairs, employment, environment and legislation.

If you notice, in the library world we no longer talk in terms of just the printed word because collections include both print and non-print materials. Non-print materials include formats such as records, audio, cassettes, 8 mm and 16 mm films, videocassette tapes, long playing records, and compact discs.

Again, size and budget constraints mean that most libraries such as Millbury's cannot afford to provide collections, sometimes even small collections of various types of non-print materials. However, if a patron wants particular format and specific titles or subject areas, many times we can accommodate them by once more turning to the Regional System. This time we go to the Audiovisual Library Services of the Region, located at the Fitchburg Public Library. They still maintain a collection of select 16mm films. They also have a growing collection of videocassette tapes from how-to's to travelogues and feature length movies. Their catalog is available at the library. All films must be booked in advance.

If you or someone you know cannot read because of a physical disability, the library can also help you get the materials you want. In addition to our own large print collection that is supplemented by the Regional large print collections, the library can help link you up with Talking Book Services. Applications for Talking Book Services can be provided through the library or from the Talking Book Library Main South Branch of the Worcester Public Library, 998 Main Street. The Talking Book Library, another service administered by the Regional System, provides materials that include large print materials, low vision adapters, automatic page turners, page magnifiers, a Kurzweil Reading Machine and commercial recordings. This service is available to anyone with visual limitations, weakness or crippling conditions, or an organically founded learning disability. It is part of the Library of Congress, National Library Service for the Blind and Handicapped.

Libraries, including Millbury's, do not stand alone in their efforts to meet the needs of their communities. They work together and with the Central Massachusetts Regional System, government agencies, and other private and public institutions to meet the reference and information needs and provide access collections in both print and non-print formats to people throughout the Commonwealth. They are essential to providing a quality of service the Millbury community expects at the local level.

LIBRARY HOURS: Tuesday-Thursday, 10-8; Friday, 10-6; Saturday, 10-3. Telephone: 865-1181.

Punch List Leaves Committee in Fighting Mood

By Alec Belisle

MILLBURY - On Saturday, October 28, members of the Transfer Station Building Committee, made up of the Board of Selectmen, the Board of Health and the Solid Waste Advisory Committee, met with SEA engineer Diane Reynolds and Edward Kaye, a representative of Mulholland Construction Company, to review a "punch list" of items left to be completed before the transfer station can be opened for public use.

As Reynolds went through the 17 item list, members of the committee revealed their irritation that the transfer station is not ready. All items have to be corrected before the town can seek and get approval from the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) and the Building Inspector.

Among the major items left to be completed is a sanitary facility which will be portable until permanent facilities are installed. The plumbing has been installed in the building, but it must be connected to an outside system. Another major item is the baffle plate which is to be installed along one wall of the interior of the transfer station to prevent damage to the structure when refuse materials are loaded into packers. Controversy over responsibility for designing the baffle plate still exists between the contractor and SEA. According to Reynolds, the dispute has been going on since February. She said the baffle plate is scheduled to be delivered on Thursday, November 2.

Other items include work on the riprap along the back parking lot, connection of electricity, replacement of electric motors, restoration work on Buck Brothers' property, flooring in the station office and other minor work. Members of the committee toured the interior and exterior of the facility listing other minor work which should be completed before the town accepts the building.

Jude Cristo, Chairman of the board of selectmen, expressed his frustration saying, "Most of these things (punch list items) are petty things. It seems these things (the completion of these items) drag on and on, and we can't open."

"Last year it was said that the building would be done by October. When will this be done?" asked Board of Health member Jim Dwinell.

Reynolds replied that the contract with the town and Mulholland Construction stipulated that the deadline for completion of the project was September 22. "I would like to say that we should go into the contract and assess Mulholland (for failure to complete)," Dwinell said. The liquidation damages for failure to complete the project are $400.00 per day, according to Reynolds.

Dwinell added, "The town's been more than fair to the general contractor. It's time we start assessing him."

Reynolds also said that Mulholland has not paid five vendors. "Some vendors haven't been paid since March," she said. She advised the officials that it was not the town's obligation to pay the vendors but rather Mulholland who has already been paid by the town for the work completed. Cristo said the town should not pay Mulholland the remaining amount until the job is done.

George D'Auteuil, a member of the Solid Waste Advisory Committee, suggested that a motion be made that the committee has to vote on any more payments to Mulholland.

Cristo noted that the performance bond expires on November 29, and the town should be sure that all the work is completed before that time or collect the bond.

Reynolds agreed that threatening to go to the bonding company might force Mulholland to complete the project because losing the bond will affect Mulholland's ability to get further bonding at reasonable rates.

Richard Dwinell, chairman of the Transfer Station Building Committee, moved that no further payments be made to Mulholland until all the problems are resolved. All members present voted in favor of the motion.

It was noted by Solid Waste Advisory Committee Chairman Peter Boria that today's meeting was rescheduled from 9:00 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. to accommodate Mr. Mulholland, who failed to show up for the meeting.
